9. Corroboration of the contents of the discipline with the expectations of the representatives of the epistemic community, of the professional associations and representative employers in the field associated with the programme

The content of the study program is developed based on the requirements of the labor market regarding training in the field of applied linguistics. Permanent contact with representatives of professional associations in the field, such as the French Institute, the University Agency of Francophonie and the enterprises with French capital in Romania will develop foreign language skills. Demonstrating positive attitudes towards training in the French language as a component in general training, awareness of the need for assisted and unassisted individual study in acquiring knowledge in the French language, as well as optimal and creative capitalization of one's own potential through training in a foreign language through educational procedures formal, informal and non-formal are aspects that broaden the general culture. They represent an important factor that increases the employability of future LMA ASE graduates.
